

Sl. No	Name	Area	Established	Description
1	Kenting National Park	332.90 km ² (82,261.4 acres), 180.84 km ² of land, and 152.06 km ² water	1984	Located on the southern tip of Taiwan, it is also the oldest national park on the Taiwan (Pingtung County), Kenting is famous for its tropical coral reef and migratory birds.
2	Yushan National Park	1,031.21 km ² (254,817.5 acres)	1985	The largest national park in Taiwan, located on the central part of the island. it contains Jade Mountain (Yushan literally means "Jade Mountain", 3952 m) which is the highest peak in East Asia.
3	Yangmingshan National Park	113.38 km ² (28,016.8 acres)	1985	The northernmost national park on the island of Taiwan; it has a volcanic landform. Yangminshan is famous for its hot springs and geothermal phenomenon. Each spring, Yangminshan also have a dazzling flower season. It is partially in Taipei City and partially in New Taipei City.
4	Taroko National Park	920 km ² (227,337.0 acres)	1986	A magnificent marble gorge cut by Li-Wu River, creating one of the most astounding landscape in the world. It is also the home of the indigenous Truku people. Taroko is located in eastern Taiwan.
5	Shei-Pa National Park	768.5 km ² (189,900.5 acres)	1992	Located in the central northern part of Taiwan island, in Hsinchu County and Miaoli County. It is the home of Xueshan, or Snow Mountain, Taiwan and East Asia's second tallest mountain, and of Dabajian Mountain and the Holy Ridge.
6	Kinmen National Park	35.29 km ² (8,720.3 acres)	1995	Due to its proximity to Mainland China, there are historical battlefields in Kinmen. It is also famous for its wetland ecosystem and its traditional Fujian buildings that dated back to the Ming Dynasty. It is not located on Taiwan Island, but instead on an island just off the coast of Mainland China.
7	Dongsha Atoll National Park	3,536.68 km ² (873,932.7 acres), including 1.79 km ² of land	2007	The first oceanic National Park. It houses about 72 species of endemic plants, and 125 species of insects. Like Kinmen National Park, it is not located on Taiwan Island. Because strict protection is being taken on Dongsha, it is currently not open to public tourism.
8	Taijiang National Park	393.1 km ² (97,137.1 acres), 49.05 km ² of land, and 344.05 km ² water	2009	Located in southwest Taiwan on the coast of Tainan. The park's tidal landscape is one of its most distinctive features. Around 200 years ago, a large part of the park was part of the Taijiang Inland Sea. There is a rich variety of marine life, including 205 species of shellfish, 240 species of fish and 49 crab species that thrive on the marshes of southern Taiwan.
9	South Penghu Marine National Park	358.44 km ² (88,572.5 acres), including 3.70 km ² of land	2014	Located in the south of Penghu. The seas feature large clusters of Acropora coral and a diversity of fish and shells living among the reefs. The islets are also known for magnificent basalt terrains and unique low-roofed houses built by early inhabitants with coral stone and basalt.

For more information kindly visit : www.downloadexcelfiles.com